RECOMMENDING THE APPROPRIATE COMMENCING SALARY

Unless a higher commencing salary has been approved by the Clerk of the Parliaments, new employees will commence on the Year 1 rate for their position's salary classification.

A Member may recommend a higher commencing salary based on possession of the qualifications and/or relevant experience outlined below and overleaf. Current salary may also be taken into account when determining the appropriate commencing salary level. In these instances, the current salary must be considered in combination with relevant qualifications and/or relevant experience.

A commencing salary rate, once accepted by a new employee signing/electronically accepting their contract, cannot be retrospectively adjusted or renegotiated under any circumstances. Once salary has been established, salary incremental progression will only occur after 12 months service on a particular rate of pay, for example, from the date of appointment or the last increment paid. This incremental progression is subject to satisfactory conduct, attendance and performance. No consideration will be given to reviewing the salary level as a result of staff being awarded additional tertiary educational qualifications during the course of employment, or for any other reason.

RELEVANT QUALIFICATION(S), EXPERIENCE & SKILLS

To demonstrate previous work experience, detailed documentation supporting the relevance of that experience and the specific dates of employment must be provided. Wherever possible written references to verify dates and roles/duties from former employers should be provided. Otherwise, the information must be provided in the form of a Statutory Declaration. Where work experience has been on a casual basis, the number of hours per week must be provided as this will be converted to the equivalent full-time period.

The relevance of previous work experience will be assessed against the Selection criteria as outlined in the relevant position description

- Position description – Secretary/Research Assistant

Volunteer work and skills obtained or developed in the course of gaining an educational qualification are not considered relevant as work experience (e.g. research skills utilised to complete coursework).

SUPPORTING DOCUMENTATION

Appropriate documentation must be provided to support a claim for a recommended commencing salary that is higher than Year 1. This documentation should include:

- payslip and/or letter from employer confirming current salary paid (if relevant);
- original or certified copy of qualification(s); and
- detailed curriculum vitae or proof of employment history, including specific dates of employment, indication of full time/part time or casual work including hours worked, and summary of role/duties to demonstrate the relevance of experience. If these are unavailable, this information must be provided in the form of a Statutory Declaration.

Please note: The provision of false or misleading information to support a higher commencing salary request may lead to the employee's dismissal.
